Martin Plumlee

Martin is a “native son” and proud ambassador of Nashville. He graduated from Hillwood High School in 1990 and was blessed to earn an appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point. Martin graduated from West Point in 1994, receiving a Bachelor of Science in Economics, as well as a commission as an Infantry Second Lieutenant. He earned his MBA in International Business from Tennessee Technological University in 2006.

Martin resumed his Army career in 2008 in Miami, Florida. He deployed from June 2013 until February 2014 to Kuwait as a military police officer in support of Operation Enduring Freedom. While overseas, Martin was promoted to the rank of Major. He recently completed the Army’s Command and General Staff Operations Course (CGSOC). Martin just assumed duties as the executive officer/deputy commander of the 304th Military Police Battalion in Nashville.

Over the past 15 years, he has excelled in recruiting, specialty sales, and management roles with global companies such as General Electric, Johnson & Johnson, and Robert Half International. In 2012, he founded Plumlee & Associates LLC, with his business partner (and wife) Amy. The firm is working diligently and will soon complete certification as a Veteran-Owned Small Business (VOSB).

Professionally, Martin is a respected and successful business owner, executive recruiter, and leadership strategist. He distinguishes himself as a subject matter expert in Talent Acquisition & Talent Management based on numerous years of partnering with both mid-size and Fortune 1000 companies across Tennessee, the Midwest, and the East Coast.

In terms of family, Martin is very happily married to Amy; they have two beautiful kids. Emma Grace is almost four years old (born on Veterans’ Day 2011); Elijah is turning one in October.

Martin’s relationship with Habitat for Humanity began in 2010 during a volunteer service/clean-up project at the ReStore in Nashville. More recently, he has developed a relationship with Executive Director Becket Moore and Kim Randell, the Director of Development. Martin has also joined Habitat’s Marketing and Development Committee.

“Our family is blessed to call Williamson County home. My goal is to contribute in a significant way by spreading the vision, mission, and purpose of Habitat in an area that is not always affordable to some families. This is meaningful and important work; honored to join the board and support this fantastic organization and help some nearby families. Habitat’s mission is about ‘inspiring hope and life-changing stability for families through homeownership.’ This is a noble and important cause.”
